Agtech valuations jump 59% as investors chase quality over quantity

Agtech VC activity took a cautious turn in Q2 2025, with deal activity falling 22.8% to $1.5 billion across 118 deals. But here is the twist: While overall funding has declined, investors are getting pickier and writing bigger checks. Median deal sizes jumped from $3.1 million to $5 million, and pre-money valuations soared from $15.1 million to $24 million YTD.

The quarter’s biggest story? Precision agriculture startups just pulled off their first funding victory over ag biotech since 2017, raising $580.2 million compared with biotech’s $270.6 million. DroneDeploy’s $15.2 million Series E and RootWave’s $15 million round led the charge, while Vestaron’s massive $102.8 million late-stage round dominated the biotech side.

4% of deals now happening at the late stage—compared with just one-third in 2020—it’s clear that the agtech market has matured. Late-stage startups face tougher odds, but established players with solid fundamentals are commanding premium valuations in this challenging environment.
