Growth fintech companies stick the landing

The second quarter of 2025 delivered a sharp rebound for fintech stocks as markets shook off tariff fears and surged to new highs. Growth fintech names capitalized on renewed risk appetite, with neobanks, brokers & crypto platforms posting a median 101% return. Consumer fintech operators, in particular, shone by proving they can "min-max" their operations by driving engagement and profitability while keeping costs in check.

Fueled by the upturn, eToro, Circle, and Chime the moment to break the IPO drought, Javav and Wealthfront poised to follow. The initial euphoria faded fast—only Circle stayed in the green since its debut, and the tariff threats could slam the brakes on the recent growth rally.

Q2 2025 Fintech & Payments Public Comp Sheet and Valuation Guide tracks metrics for key publicly traded companies that include stock performance, changes in valuation, historical earnings, revenue growth, EBITDA growth, and profit margins. It is constructed using the PitchBook Excel plugin available to subscribers.
