DISRUPT

At TechCrunch Disrupt 2025, taking place October 27-29 at Moscone West in San Francisco, we're getting real about what it takes to land a Series A in today's market—no smoke, no mirrors, just the unfiltered perspective from the people signing the checks.

Series A has changed — here's how to win in 2026

This Builder Stage session brings together three power players in early-stage investing: Katie Stanton (Moxie Ventures), Thomas Krane (Insight Partners), and Sangeen Zeb (GV). They've seen thousands of decks, led major rounds, and helped steer startups from scrappy beginnings to breakout scale.

This conversation goes deeper than the headlines. From the metrics that matter and how to tell your growth story, to what causes investors to walk away

Why this conversation matters now

As distributed teams, regional hubs, and global fundraising become more normalized, founders are increasingly asking if their ZIP code actually gives them an edge. Does being in the Bay Area still open the right doors? Or has the playing field finally leveled?

This session brings together startup veterans and seasoned investors who've built and backed companies across the country — and well beyond it. They'll dig into what access looks like in 2025, how remote collaboration has evolved post-pandemic, and where true opportunity lies for emerging founders.

Who's taking the Builders Stage for this session

Anh-Tho Chuong is rethinking open source billing with Lago, a YC-backed platform trusted by AI leaders like Mistral and Together. From her time scaling Qonto to her early roles at Weebly and McKinsey, she's no stranger to navigating growth across continents.

How startups are rewriting the late-stage playbook at TechCrunch Disrupt 2025

TechCrunch Events — 9:00 AM PDT · July 9, 2025

The rules of growth have changed. At TechCrunch Disrupt 2025, happening October 27-29 at Moscone West in San Francisco, 10,000+ startup and VC leaders will gather to explore how founders are adapting in a market that looks nothing like it did five years ago. And on October 27, on the premier industry stage Going Public, David George of Andreessen Horowitz will take the mic for a fireside chat focused on one of the biggest questions facing founders today — how do you scale and succeed when the old rules no longer apply?

What happens when your company stays private longer?

Startups today can reach multibillion-dollar valuations, cash out early employees, and stay private far longer than their predecessors. But those benefits come with trade-offs. Late-stage founders now face a new set of expectations around capital efficiency, liquidity, and growth strategy. This fireside chat with David George, general partner at Andreessen Horowitz, will unpack what it really takes to build enduring companies in today's VC landscape.

George leads the Growth investing team at a16z and has backed some of the most iconic tech names of the last decade, including Airbnb, Slack, Opendoor, and Uber. His insight into how capital is deployed — from early rounds to late-stage funding and secondary markets — offers founders a rare look behind the curtain at what growth investors are looking for now.

Why this conversation matters now

With fewer IPOs, increased scrutiny on burn, and more capital staying private longer, today's late-stage companies are navigating a totally different

How founders are ditching VC norms and finding capital on their own terms at TechCrunch Disrupt 2025

TechCrunch Events — 7:30 AM PDT · July 31, 2025

At TechCrunch Disrupt 2025 happening October 27-29 at Moscone West in San Francisco, a candid conversation is coming to the Builder Stage — one that unpacks what startup funding looks like beyond the venture capital echo chamber.

Funding routes that don't start in the Valley

Founders today have more capital paths than ever. But how do you navigate them — and know which one actually supports your growth? In this session, hear from Erik Allebest, the CEO and co-founder of Chess.com; Gale Wilkinson, the founder and managing partner at VITALIZE; and Kay Makishi, vice president at Lupoff/Stevens Family Office. Each brings a different perspective on how to raise money without giving up your vision or your cap table.

Whether you're bootstrapping, tapping family offices, or building through angel networks, this discussion breaks down what's working now, what to avoid, and how to choose the approach that fits your goals.

Meet the speakers carving out new funding lanes

Erik Allebest turned a college passion into Chess.com, now the leading platform for players and learners with over 165 million users. Built without chasing venture capital, it's a bootstrapped success story in a league of its own.

Gale Wilkinson has made 50 personal angel investments and led more than $80 million in early-stage funding across 150 startups. She's a WorkTech expert, a champion for diversity in venture, and a go-to voice for founders who want capital that shares their values.

Kay Makishi brings a cross-border lens as a key investor at a New York-based family office. With experience spanning U.S. and Japanese markets, she offers rare insight into how high-net-worth individuals and families back startups for impact, not just returns.
