US PE adapts amid a fuzzier outlook

The US private equity ecosystem entered 2025 with strong momentum that was halted by broad market uncertainty at the beginning of Q2. PE is now tasked with balancing these new market headwinds with its desire to reignite this momentum. Despite the hiccups, IPO activity for PE has gotten off to a healthy start this year. However, the challenge is whether the IPO window will remain open for PE-backed companies. Similarly, the recent market slowdown will likely stall overall exit activity, seeing sponsors hold on to portfolio companies for longer, further limiting distributions to LPs and hampering fundraising activity in the back half of the year.
