Methodology for Unicorn Boards

This curated Crunchbase Unicorn Board includes private unicorn companies with post-money valuations of $1 billion or more and is based on Crunchbase data. New companies are added to this unicorn company list as they reach the $1 billion valuation mark as part of a funding round. Data for companies already on the leaderboard is updated when there is a new funding round announced.

For the sake of consistency, this board is ranked based on valuations set by investors during priced funding rounds for companies. The unicorn board does not reflect internal company valuations — such as those set via a 409a process for employee stock options — as these differ from, and are more likely to be lower than, a priced funding round. We also do not adjust valuations based on investor writedowns, which change quarterly, since different investors will not value the same company consistently within the same quarter.

The Exited Unicorn List  includes companies that reached a valuation of $1 billion or more as private companies and subsequently exited via acquisition or IPO. The list is based on a curated Crunchbase dataset and market data. Companies that reach a $1 billion-plus valuation for the first time via an exit event are not included on the list.

The curated Emerging Unicorn Board includes private companies with valuations of $500 million or more but less than $1 billion, based on Crunchbase data. Crunchbase's emerging unicorns list is updated whenever a new company reaches that valuation range or there is a change in valuation for a company already on the leaderboard.
