Methodology

Fluorbooks's 2024 Annual Manager Performance Scores provide a data-driven, objective measure of private capital fund families' historical performance relative to their peer groups. The framework accounts for strategy, vintage, fund maturity, and realized returns.

How scores are calculated

- Benchmark selection: Constructed by combining a peer group of funds based on:
- Fund classification (private equity, venture capital, real estate, and so on)
- Vintage year +/- one year. The three-year window is utilized to improve data counts of peer group comparisons with funds actively investing within a similar window. The higher data counts reduce outlier impact from outliers.
- Fund score calculation: The fund's most recent IR is subtracted from the median IR of the peer group created in step 1. We normalize the scores IR using a modified Z score, which is less affected by outliers than traditional Z scores.
- Weight assignment: Each fund in a fund family with a score is assigned a weight based on its age, realized distributions, and the deviation of the fund IR from its benchmark.
- Family score calculation: We calculate the weighted average scores for funds in the family. We then convert the family score to a 0-100 scale, with 50 representing a neutral performance (neither leading nor lagging to its benchmark).

Ratings

- Gold: Top 10% of Performance Scores within each strategy
- Silver: 10th to 90th percentile
- Bronze: Scores above the neutral 50-point threshold

Performance Scores are intended as a consistent input for managers due diligence. Rankings are based on data as of June 30, 2023, using fund returns through December 31, 2024.
