Revolut eyes $65B valuation in upcoming funding round

By Leah Hodgson

Published July 10, 2025

London-based challenger bank Revolut is in talks to raise around $1 billion in primary and secondary funding in a deal that could value it at $65 billion, the Financial Times reported.

US investor Greenoaks is said to be in discussions to lead the round. Abu Dhabi's Mubadala is among other investors likely to participate. Earlier this week, it was reported that the sovereign wealth fund is looking to acquire a $100 million stake in Revolut through a secondary share sale.

This would be the second time in less than a year that Revolut has pursued such a deal. In August, the company was valued at $45 billion following a secondary share sale led by Coatue, D1 Capital Partners and Tiger Global.

Revolut is currently Europe’s most valuable VC-backed company. In April, the company reported a 72% increase in revenue to $4 billion and a pre-tax profit of $1.4 billion in its 2024 annual report.

The fintech received a UK banking license last year and is applying for a license in France, where it set up a new Western Europe headquarters this year. The company is also said to be renewing its efforts to pursue a license in the US.
