

The Crunchbase Megadeals Board

The Crunchbase Megadeals Leaderboard is a curated list of $100 million-plus VC funding rounds to private companies based in the United States. Global venture funding in 2024 edged above 2023's totals, with AI showing the biggest leap in amounts. Many of those deals were billion-dollar-plus rounds — 19% of all startup funding in 2024 went to billion-dollar rounds. Last year also saw some of the largest venture funding deals on record, including to AI companies Databricks, OpenAI, xAI, Waymo and Anthropic.

Largest US Venture Funding Deals Of 2025

The Big Deals Of The Week

While there have been abundant headlines of late regarding huge financings in the works for AI unicorns, none formally closed in the past few days.

Even so, we did see a number of good-sized deals announced in sectors including therapeutics, enterprise software, rare earth magnets and, yes, AI.

Methodology

This board tracks announced venture funding deals of $100 million or more in the Crunchbase database that were raised by U.S.-based companies.

Although most of the largest funding rounds of 2023, 2024 and 2025 are represented in the database, there could be a small time lag as deals are added to the Crunchbase dataset.

We consider VC funding deals to be both venture capital investment in private companies as well as private equity and growth rounds into companies that have previously raised venture funding.

Frequently Asked Questions

— What is venture capital funding?

Venture capital is a type of private equity typically invested into emerging startup companies that investors believe have high growth potential and will deliver outsized returns.

In exchange for equity stakes in the companies, venture capital firms and other investors provide capital to private companies that they believe have the potential for successful exits when they eventually go public or are acquired at a premium.

A VC funding deal typically has one or two lead investors, with other investment firms participating in the round by providing smaller stakes.
